Review of Late Work Policy

I urge you to review all the tasks for each week and plan out what you will do. All assignments can be found in the Essay Cycle Assignment Sheets. <http://www.lirvin.net/1301sitebb/assign.htm>

Unless otherwise stated, work is due at the beginning of class.

You are welcome to work ahead and turn things in early. (Don't go by Canvas due times.)

Late daily work gets no credit!

Daily work includes pretty much everything that is not a draft of an essay.

Late Essay Draft Assignment Policy:

Essays during the semester are not graded, but you do get credit for whether the draft is turned in "on-time" or not. All essay drafts must be turned in by the designated due date or the draft is late. In addition, for the draft to be counted as "on time," you must also complete the peer responses and Writing Review on time.

THREE completed and on-time tasks equal an "on-time draft"

1. Draft
2. Finished peer response
3. Completed writing review

If you don't have ALL three completed on-time, the draft is technically "late," and you won't get the points for this draft.

Late drafts count in the "On-Time Drafts and Conferences" portion of your grade (20% of your overall grade).

Here is how your On-Time Drafts and Conferences portion of your grade is calculated (for each essay cycle):

Draft 1	on-time = 6 pts.		late = 0 pts.
Draft 2	on-time = 6 pts.		late = 0 pts.
Draft 3	on-time = 8 pts.		late = 0 pts.

Total Possible Points: 20

Unacceptable drafts, either due to lack of effort, incompleteness, or divergence from the assigned task, will be considered as "late." Turning in unrevised drafts will result in a zero for the entire "On-Time" grade for that essay (0/20).

Contact me if you have something serious come up that impedes your ability to do your work. Within reason, I will make allowances to accommodate you. But you have to contact me as soon as your problem arises.

Required Rewrite Policy: The instructor reserves the right to require students to rewrite unacceptable essays. In these cases, all rewrites are due within one week or the late policy for final drafts takes effect.
